Inquisitorial Body Investigates 39 Cases During Session

Twenty-three indictments were returned by the Ouachita parish grand jury in district court here yesterday afternoon, but none of them were the outgrowth of current political scandals.

The jury, in its report to Judge David I. Garrett, announced it had investigated 39 cases and had found 23 true bills, 13 no true bills and that three cases were pretermitted.

The federal grand jury, which convened Monday a week ago, at the same time the parish body went into session, was still investigating "routine cases" yesterday, according to reports. tine cases were probed and three were no-billed, but United States Attorney Harvey G. ### Steady Job

Whether congress continues the present emergency session to proposed amendment of the neutrality law. or whether it remains in session thereafter, one proposal has been made that sounds useful.

It is that congress set up a committee to examine foreign propaganda, and that this committee sit continuously even if congress adjourns. Such a committee, to enable the people to understand more clearly what goes on in the world. It is essential not only that news be given, but that it be weighed and assessed as to source and purpose. Newspapers are trying hard to help their readers to do this, but a congressional committee with power of subpoena might be a great help at times. Coaches Check Passing Combination That Beat Holy Cross

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 10.—49— The BayouTigers of Louisiana State their 26-7 victory over Holy Cross and settled down to work for their next foes, the Rice Owls.

Only a light workout was held Monday, stressing passing, but scrimmages were scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday by Coach Bernie Moore.

Lighter drills Thursday and Friday will serve to taper off the Bengals for Rice, a team which will be out to avenge the 3-0 licking L. S. U. administered the Owls last year.

The ace passing combination that wrecked Holy Cross, little Sophomore Leo Bird flinging toward lanky Ken Kavanaugh, received a thorough checking Monday afternoon.

Ashford Simes, injured back whom Bird replaced against Holy Cross, alternated in working with the first and second teams, but it was considered while his passes still click. Only casualty in the Holy Cross game was Woodrow Barret, reserve
